
21st Century Relationships

21ST CENTURY RELATIONSHIPS

Title: 21st Century Relationships

Subtitle: Give yourself the gift of relationship education.

Explanation and Description: In addition to not really knowing ourselves the vast majority of us make incompatible relationship choices and use parenting methods that are 2,000 years old. These three books offer a unique educational format for learning about relationships consisting of three fundamentals and a variety of techniques and skills. Twenty self-knowledge and compatibility assessments are also included.

Book 1. Intrapersonal Intelligence (AI). Fundamental #1: Knowing yourself.

Book 2. Interpersonal Intelligence (EI). Fundamental #2: Your relationships with others.

Book 3. Parental Intelligence (PI). Fundamental #3: Your relationship with your children.

The fundamentals are progressive because until you know yourself it is difficult to have satisfying and fulfilling relationships with others and until you have taken in the lessons and been transformed by them it is difficult to teach your children.

21st Century Relationships is the product of over thirty years of research. This extensive literature review reports what leading relationship experts, from early relationship pioneers such as Alfred Adler and Rudolf Dreikurs to modern-day experts such as William Glasser and John Gottman, have found that works to achieve satisfying and fulfilling relationships. There are no social, economic, or educational boundaries with this program – anyone can do it. However, to get the most out of it, it is important to be willing to devote your time, be open to learning something new, and possibly change some things you have done all of your life. We all learn different things at different times of our lives.

Ever get bored?

Boring is the opposite of fun.

It always occurs when you have to spend time not learning.
